Course objectives:

The aim of this course is to build upon the observations on economic theories (i.e. especially Macroeconomics). The content is oriented on expanding existing knowledge and on its linkage to economic theories appropriate to national economic policies.

A further aim is that Doctoral students attain a level where they will be able to demonstrate the ability to underpin their Doctoral Dissertation thesis with Economic Theory and the Theories of Economic Policy.

Requirements on student

Two weeks before the examination the Doctoral student has to hand over the structure of his/her dissertation thesis in writing and indicate, in points, economic theories on which the dissertation will be based. The Doctoral student has also to be able to react to questions such as e.g. how the present national economy politics influences the problem solved by the Doctoral student.

Way of course termination: Examination in a form of a scientific debate based on the elaborated seminar work.

Excuse for absence: In the case of absence the Doctoral student agrees conditions of the course termination with the lecturer in person, especially the seminar work topic.
